

Pictures to Die For

Journalism at its very best. --Noel Young, Former Editor, The Sunday Mail (Glasgow) My God! We have James Bond working for us! --Michel Sola, Picture Editor Paris Match Magazine You are not just the James Bond of Journalism. You are also the Jason Bourne, Philip Marlowe, Sherlock Holmes and maybe a dash of Columbo. A brilliant achievement. --John Wellington, managing editor, The Mail on Sunday, London Photo journalist Ron Laytner has lived a life few can imagine. While on a constant quest for the worlds best stories, he has stepped on Queen Elizabeths foot. Photographed President John F. Kennedy shortly before his assassination and survived an airliner crash into a crocodile infested African river. One of the most celebrated and widely published photo journalists Laytner shares his amazing photographs and tales from his globe-trotting adventures in Pictures To Die For which shows why they called him the James Bond of Journalism. Laytners journey began when he faced a rifle-firing madman on his first assignment for the Toronto Telegram. We share Laytners fear while surviving a submarine accident off the coast of Canada. His infiltration of the Ku Klux Klan. He got the first photograph of international terrorist Carlos the Jackal., avoided being hanged as a spy on the island of Zanzibar. He was even ambassador of a country in the embattled South China Sea.
